Just wanted to document two recent car incidents.

First was Saturday (1/16) on the way to ██████ soccer game.

I was on SE Haig Street stopped at a stop sign waiting to cross 17th Street, which is a busy street. There was a long line of cars going by. ██████ approached, stopped and began waving frantically for me to cross. I looked at ██████ for a moment, ██████ had a wide-eyed look on her face. I chose to turn the other direction to avoid any semblance of a problem. Hannah was in the front seat and saw ██████ behavior. So did the ██████ in the backseat.

Tuesday, 1/19

At 2:30 p.m. I was driving to ██████ house to drop off ██████ bag (which he had requested not be dropped off until close to when he would get home because he had all his xbox controllers in it). As I approached the house ██████ I saw ██████ backing out of the driveway. I was still about three houses down the street, but there were no other cars. ██████ looked at me, stopped in the middle of the street, blocking it completely. I drove up to the house and stopped and waited for ██████ to leave. ██████ did not drive off immediately, and stared at me. Eventually, ██████ drove off and I pulled into the driveway -- ██████ -- and put ██████ bag inside the fence.
